

Kun Ran
Xudong Tang
October 13, 2014

Income Sources of College Students

In China, most of the students in college spend their parents's money until they leave school, only a few students have extra income like part-time job and scholarship. But in America, main source of their income is part-time job, it account for about 50% of the income. Another part is from scholarship and parents.

Obviously, students in America is more independent than Chinese students. Students in China are not tend to earn money by themselves, instead of asking for money from their parents over and over again. Only a few students realised this problem and started to earn money by themselves. In America, students are well trained to be independent, most of them have a part-time job when they are in college.

I think, students should be more independent to live with their own effort just like the society does, they can also learn a lot from real work.